6 secrets of newborn sleep | Living and Loving

Your baby will wake and need your help going back to sleep until she can learn to soothe herself to sleep. This is because newborn babies aren't geared to sleep for long periods of time without a feed. Most healthy and well nourished babies will sleep through the night (for 10 to 12 hours) between the ages of four and six months of age. This means that your baby may be up about 16 times every night until then.
